

Lewis E. Devendorf

Mercer Human Resources (Retired)
Rio Verde, Arizona

Lewis E. Devendorf is a retired worldwide partner at Mercer Human Resources, where he served as a senior consultant and as a member of the firm's national health and benefits management team. He currently serves as a director for the consulting firm Health Benefits Strategies. While at Mercer, Devendorf led Mercer's southern markets for health and benefits, overseeing operations in 22 offices in 14 states, and a budget of $65M annually. Devendorf also provided consulting services to clients on a wide array of issues associated with providing health care benefits to employees, carve-out programs, overall medical plan strategies and cost/pricing. Before joining Mercer, he was the executive director of two health plans operating in New York and Connecticut and director of operations of a group model HMO in the west. Devendorf received a B.S. degree in economics from Lafayette College in Pennsylvania and continued his education with postgraduate studies at the University of North Carolina.
