Bertrand Milot is chief executive officer and founder of the cyber defense and innovation firm Bradley & Rollins. He has over 20 years of experience in cybersecurity, as well as threat modeling, cybercriminal surveillance and corporate security governance. Bertrand has also led several cyber investigations and managed major crises related to cybercrime incidents, including global attacks and ransomware compromises. He conducts comprehensive risk analyses that consider both the physical and logical security of information, as well as vulnerabilities related to people, processes and technologies. Bertrand draws on his in-depth knowledge of emerging technologies (AI, quantum encryption and blockchain architectures), cybercrime and the deep/dark web to make organizations cyber-resilient and able to withstand current and future threats.
