

Ray Sawyer

Director of Community Health Partnerships
Well
Chapel Hill, North Carolina

Ray Sawyer is the director of community health partnerships at Well, which is a health improvement platform with a mission to be the world's most effective partner in the advancement of individualized health. In collaboration with health organizations and sponsors, Ray leads the strategy and execution to drive more equitable availability of Well's platform to communities. During his tenure in the technology industry, including working at Google in Mountain View, California, Ray led cross-functional change in strategy and external engagement. He is often sought-after to facilitate community building with individuals, teams, and organizations. Prior to completing a Fulbright grant in Busan, South Korea, Ray received his undergraduate degree in global studies concentrating in global health from The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, where he was a Morehead-Cain Scholar. He now serves on the Morehead-Cain Scholarship Fund board.