

James A. Wooten, J.D., Ph.D.

Professor of Law
Vice Dean for Research and Faculty Development
University at Buffalo School of Law
Buffalo, New York

Jim Wooten is professor of law and vice dean for research and faculty development at the University at Buffalo School of Law, where he teaches contracts, pension and employee benefit law, jurisprudence and legal reasoning. He is the author of The Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974: A Political History and focuses his research on regulatory policies affecting retirement plans, health plans and other employee benefit plans. Before joining UB, Wooten was an associate at Bredhoff & Kaiser, a legal history fellow at Yale Law School and a Golieb Fellow in legal history at NYU Law School. He earned his J.D. degree and a Ph.D. degree in American studies at Yale and is a fellow of the American College of Employee Benefits Counsel.